5. WORKING EXPERIENCE

- As a first-year student at the University of Dodoma, I conducted practical training sessions focused on system development. This hands-on experience provided me with valuable insights into the intricacies of developing robust and efficient systems, laying a strong foundation for my future endeavors.
- Subsequently, during my second year, I worked at TEMESA, where I developed the TEMESA Management System, handling both the frontend and backend development. During this project, I collaborated closely with cross-functional teams to ensure the system met the organization's operational needs. I was responsible for designing user-friendly interfaces, implementing efficient backend solutions, and ensuring data integrity and security. This experience allowed me to demonstrate my full-stack development skills, optimize system performance, and contribute to enhancing organizational efficiency and streamlining operations.
- In my third year, I worked at NARCO, where I contributed to the development of the Animal Notification System. As the frontend developer, I was responsible for designing and implementing intuitive user interfaces, ensuring a seamless user experience. I collaborated with backend developers to integrate the system with real-time data, enabling timely notifications for animal-related incidents. My role also involved optimizing the system for mobile responsiveness and performance, ensuring it met the needs of users in the field. This experience helped me hone my skills in frontend development, problem-solving, and working within a collaborative, agile environment.
- Additionally, I have actively participated in various software projects, leveraging my skills and knowledge to contribute effectively to their success. These projects have provided me with opportunities to apply theoretical concepts in real-world scenarios, further refining my problem-solving abilities and enhancing my proficiency in software development.
